

Reflections in fabric: the mirror of assimilation

(by M.G., Liceo N. Machiavelli, Roma)

You know how everyone's stressing about wearing the right clothes? It's like we're so obsessed with that we start to lose who we really are. I wanted to show how we become like the clothes we wear, almost like we're turning into them. See how the eyes look like buttons and the mouths are sealed with zippers? It's like we're losing our own voices and becoming just another part of the fashion scene. The green in the background is there to remind us of nature. If we pay more attention to that, we'll care about what really matters.

Consulted site: <https://www.yre.global/winning-photos>